

She cries your name

Beth Orton

Falling from the western shore to find yourselves alone again
Wondering where you have been
Your lonely voice calls across the starlit coast
Reaching out to be seen

She cries your name
Three times again
She cries your name
How long can this love remain?

Cut beneath the surface screen of what we say and what we seem
Is a trick to be seen
She keeps crying out your name but her scream sound the same
How fickle fate can be.

She cries your name
Three times the pain
She cries your name
How long can this love remain?

Birds that scream for territory can learn to sing
Euphorically
Give him time an' he's real and there's a wasteland in your soul
The burned out trees will leave you cold
Living out an ideal.

She cries your name
Three times again
She cries your name
How long can this love remain?
She cries your name
Twelve times again
She cries your name
How long can this love remain?
