You Are On Our Side

Bethany Dillon

The orphan clings to Your hand Singing the song of how he was found The widow rejoices For her oppressors are silenced now

You sit at the table with the wounded and the poor You laugh and share stories with the thief and the whore When You could just be silent and leave us here to die Still, You sent Your Son for us You are on our side

The runaway falls at Your feet You are what he has searched for The rich man is broken When he stands beneath a sky full of stars

You sit at the table with the wounded and the poor You laugh and share stories with the thief and the whore When You could just be silent and leave us here to die Still, You sent Your Son for us You are on our side

You sit at the table with the wounded and the poor You laugh and share stories with the thief and the whore When You could just be silent and leave us here to die Still, You sent Your Son for us You are on our side

Still, You sent Your Son for us You are on our side
