Apocalyptic Dance

Bethlehem

In coldness of my dark bowel a yell after mercilessness bequeaths a trace of eternal destruction to my decency

Uneven throbbing shadowfire streams with raised melancholy through twisted channels of my forbode grief

In the black storms of my mental agony
the deliverance ripens in form of a godless dusk The faceless ancient grasps with stony miming into the cradle of mercy and severs the blood stained flag

But still it seems to me that the lightbringer spreads a shining shroud over the shadow being of an owl which died in chains

As the rock in me bursts asunder the round dance of the colouring grows up in my twilight
