Between You And I

So now she's on her way Home from work alone for dinner You close the door to the microwave Underneath that phone that just won't ring

Sittin on the bus Stare a hole right through the floor Listening to the squeaky door Open and close at a stop that's never mine

They say if It's well enough Just leave it alone and they would never Think to call your bluff The lie you believed till you're standing all exposed

Oh you confide And all those fools will fly Between you and I Between you and I

I've seen that look before On someone else Years ago and It's come Around again

Excuse me while I place a blame on you The game has conned you now And It never was your fault The wind just seemed to carry the spit your way

My time is spent So all those years can blend Between you and I Why'd you confide Now all your friends can slide Between you and I Between you and I Between you and I Between you and I

The effort to forget Nature's moving far too slow The effort to forget I still recall the effort to forget Big Wreck
