She Danced

Bill Wyman

She danced and she danced And she danced and she danced all night She danced and she danced And she danced and she danced all night

She had a dress of many colors She wore it in an Eastern way She stepped into the spotlight She took my breath away

Golden chains around her ankles The tiny, tiny feet were bare Bells on her fingers and toes Music in the air

She crossed the floor Like a shadow on a summer's night The hair was black as jet Her skin was white as white

She crossed the floor Like a shadow on a summers night And she danced and she danced And she danced and she danced all night

Tiny hands struck the air Like the wings of a bird in flight And she danced and she danced And she danced and she danced all night
