She danced and she danced And she danced and she danced all night She danced and she danced And she danced all night

She had a dress of many colors She wore it in an Eastern way She stepped into the spotlight She took my breath away

Golden chains around her ankles The tiny, tiny feet were bare Bells on her fingers and toes Music in the air

She crossed the floor
Like a shadow on a summer's night
The hair was black as jet
Her skin was white as white

She crossed the floor
Like a shadow on a summers night
And she danced and she danced
And she danced all night

Tiny hands struck the air
Like the wings of a bird in flight
And she danced and she danced
