

Through Ten Walls

Birdeatsbaby

Through Ten Walls you gently breathe A rhythm only known to you and me I would scratch these bricks away So through the hollow s you can hear me say:

"I have seen your misery You've always had a hold over me Eyes so wide to blind the fates But your sleep has kept so awake"

Through ten walls you rest alone Buried shallow under precious stone It won't be too long before Guilty hands come knocking on your door

Now you rise, you have become A symbol of all I cannot trust I may make these mountains move But you turn them to dust

It's the life you chose and how the years have frozen you my da rling how the consequences of your actions lead us to sever and betray I know

It's not like I'll ever know If you and I could roll away the s tones I can't give up my beliefs in who we are
