

What The Water Gave Me

Birdeatsbaby

I drank the beast within I drank him down so deep He got so thin
And then the beast within He learns to swim And so I cannot win Drink up, drink in These things have come to pass

The trees have grown from seeds They're planted in my feet They crack my bones My spine becomes a branch To bend, not break So bend me back again, again, and then

The life will come to pass My dull face in the dark

I dared to heal and soon I soon forgot to feel The lights were on But everything was gone The beast he screams He begs upon his knees for me to run

I run into his arms And I have come to pass

I had to let him out Just once it was enough To take the doubt
And turn it into truth The beast was free So guilty I will plea

His hands among the stars Each one will come to pass

The damage caused was great My love has turned to hate I beg for death But sleep will never come I curse the sun The beast and I are one

My life has come to pass My dull face in the dark My life has come to pass I run into the dark