

Hollywood Prison

Bleeding Through

Since you left I've found myself locked in another prison
But your bars and chains can't take the heart of this man
Without you my skies are always gray.
Now I'm seeing red through a different face.
What can I say that hasn't been said before?
I wrote your name in blood on my prison walls
And without your contact those memories are all I have
So I can't feel alone I'll never be alone
The chemicals aren't aligned
Now I'm struggling to find your fucking spine
I'll rip out your spine
You can take my pain
But you can't have my heart
You can lock me in this cold dark cell
But you can't have my heart
