

Another day, another battle in your honor and I'm branded black and blue Another escalated argument to follow and it always starts with you

The truth may be that everything's divisible by you and me but adding us together equals hearts breaking Opposites attract and that's the truth, oh

Here we're standing on the pinnacle
We're shoulder to shoulder but colder than we've ever been
We're just floating with our face down
I wonder if we'll escape before the storm comes in Starting over is the hardest call
But trust me in the end it will be worth the fall
Cause I'm sick of standing on the pinnacle with you

Three little words but if repeated without meaning they can really start to burn
But we're comfortably numb, we're so young, we're so dumb so I guess we'll never learn

The truth may be that everything's divisible by you and me
Adding us together equals hearts breaking Opposites attract, that's me and you, oh

Here we're standing on the pinnacle
We're shoulder to shoulder but colder than we've ever been
We're just floating with our face down
I wonder if we'll escape before the storm comes in
Starting over is the hardest call
But trust me in the end it will be worth the fall
Cause I'm sick of standing on the pinnacle with you

Take me home before our sins unfold
Our days I know are numbered
Let me go before I'm grey and old
Our hearts we're meant to slumber

Here we're standing on the pinnacle
We're shoulder to shoulder but colder than we've ever been
We're just floating with our face down
I wonder if we'll escape before the storm comes in
Starting over is the hardest call
But trust me in the end it will be worth the fall
Cause I'm sick of standing on the pinnacle with you