

So Sorry

Brian McKnight

For everytime you had to go asleep alone.
For everytime I tried to rush you off the phone.
For everytime I said something to make you cry.
Now that all is said and done, I can't deny.

I'm so sorry for anything I might have done.
And I'm sorry, I never meant to hurt the only one,
And I'm sorry, the best laid plans sometimes fall through,
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.

For everytime I lied right to your face,
And you knew it.
For all the wasted time that we cannot replace.
For everytime that a discussion turned into an argument, we'd fight.
Hey, how I wish that I could have it back tonight.

I'm so sorry for anything I might have done.
And I'm sorry, I never meant to hurt the only one,
And I'm sorry, the best laid plans sometimes fall through,
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.

To try and count your tears, would be like standing in the rain
. .
The weather's been bad, for year; for that I'll gladly take the blame.
Now our two separate lives will never ever be the same,
But I hope that you can forgive someday.

I'm so sorry for anything I might have done.
And I'm sorry, I never meant to hurt the only one,
And I'm sorry, the best laid plans sometimes fall through,
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.
For anything that I might've done, I apologize to you.