

Celestial Horses

Bruce Cockburn

Here come those silver celestial horses Rays of the moon in the mountain air Im steeped in the stream of the last wild hot spring Maybe Im melting but I dont care Theres darkness in the canyon but the light comes pounding through for me and for you Tomorrow may be a hissing blowtorch may be a silken sky shaken by the wind that whirls in the wake of those whispering horses But theres always a pillar of cloud on the valleys rim Theres darkness in the canyon etc
Still river full of the depths of candles burning for the free ones riding on the other shore Even at the heart of these breathing shadows you can feel us gathering at the door Theres darkness in the canyon etc
