

You choose you choose to run than see the truth be revealed Climb the tallest tree get the furthest view Yet be sightless in a world made for your eyes

I thought I knew I swore I knew But sour milk and honey is not the taste of you So I stare straight into the sun With fists clenched waiting to take flight

This body is so heavy this body is so heavy So I stand with blistered feet and bleeding knees Because here nothing can touch me

I'd rather dive then know what I would be without Rather hold the line at fear be still and know That with one voice we'll sing together together

Glory like the bee without her queen (be still and know) What am I without my king (be still and know)

You choose you choose to run than see the truth be revealed Climb the tallest tree and get the furthest view Yet be sightless in a world made for your eyes

How alluring are the legs of the fall But hold the line I'll hold the line
