

Evening

Calabrese

Ten twenty eight two thousand and one the moon rose in the night shadows parted to shine down upon this little girl

evening was born

jack-o-lanterns in a row the corn reaped in the fields a spirit entered into life a change upon this world open up your coffin, and let us in