

Hey, Don't Stop

Cartel

It's never easy to see the sun
When you're locked up in this pretty plaster cage
So she says she'd love to feel alive again
This loneliness necessitates her void

And I tell her don't stop trying to be the one
Cause one day it won't matter who you are
She's had enough of being down
And it seems that everything that she's heard
It's everything that makes her cry
And it's just about time to get this right because I don't know if it's all about taking this drink tonight
And I've been thinking baby (3x)
That you're out of your mind

So now it's midnight and she leans against the wind
She finds it cold and comforting in this bold and daring glow yeah, we all know to pass the time we pass around a few cold stares and wonder who we are
So I tell her don't stop trying to be the one
Cause one day it won't matter who you are
She's had enough of being down
And it seems that everything that she's heard
It's everything that makes her cry
It's just about time to get this right
Because i don't know if it's all about taking this drink tonight
And I've been thinking baby (3x)
That you're out of your mind

So I think she's better of this way (2x)
So I tell her don't stop trying to be the one
Cause one day it won't matter who you are
She's had enough of being down
And it seems that everything she's heard
Is everything that makes her cry
It's just about time to get this right because I don't know
If it's all about taking this drink tonight
And I've been thinking baby (3x)
That you're out of your mind
And I've been thinking baby (3x)
