Tainted

Celldweller

It's not a question of why and if she'll make it It's more a question of when and how she'll take it Standing out there alone completely naked Another secret's been kept and left her tainted

There's nothing more she can do to make them change it She does the best that she can to rearrange it There's still the question of how she's grown so tainted

A tattered canvas unfurls, watch as they paint it

She's at the edge of the world She's there standing alone She's the loneliest girl And now she finally feels like she's coming home

She's just done what she's been told
Her heart is turning to stone
Here at the end of this girl
This time she finally feels like she's coming home

Slowly fading and decaying Please ignore what they're saying

She fought them bravely until defenses caved in Pressing their teeth to her neck until she gave in Now there's no question this girl is well acquanted With suffering in a world that's left her tainted

She's at the edge of the world She's there standing alone She's the loneliest girl And now she finally feels like she's coming home

She's just done what she's been told
Her heart is turning to stone
Here at the end of this girl
This time she finally feels like she's coming home

Slowly fading and decaying Please ignore what they're saying