

Little Movements

Charlotte Church

All the little movements
That make you a real human
A full fledged human

Never known, forever true
Born with and learned and borrowed
A full fledged human

Add it up
Add it up
Add it up
The unfathomable complexity

Add it up
Add it up
Add it up
The fractal of you sitting next to me

And I've known it for a long, long, long, long time
The way that the golden sections
Collapse and expand in your eye
They're such a window to the heart of what is True

Kaleidoscopic complexity
Add it up
Add it up
Add it up
Kaleidoscopic complexity
Add it up
Add it up
Add it up

All the little movements
That make you a real human
All the little movements
That make you a real human
All the little movements
That make you a real human
All the little movements
That make you a real human

They're such a window to the heart of what is true
They're such a window to the heart of what is true
They're such a window to the heart of what is true
