Thunderstorm

I could pass the evening here Staring down into your eyes Just forget there's a world somewhere outside I kept my porch-light burning So you could find my door Felt so good to hear your footsteps Walk across my bedroom floor

I knew that you were coming By the thunderstorm last night I swear I heard the north wind call your name But a clear sky of blue stars And the darling man you are Makes it feel so good lying here next to you

This dusty town has needed rain Like I've been needing you So hold me tight as only you can do By the light of just one candle I feel your warm hands touching me While our shadows move together In the sweetest harmony

I knew that you were coming By the thunderstorm last night I swear I heard the north wind call your name But a clear sky of blue stars And the darling man you are Makes it feel so good lying here next to you

I knew that you were coming By the thunderstorm last night I swear I heard the north wind call your name But a clear sky of blue stars And the darling man you are Makes it feel so good lying here next to you
