There's Room In This Heart Tonight

Chris de Burgh

How many times can I look in your eyes, And say I have nothing to give? And how many more times must I wake in the night With dreams of the way that you live?

Well I can hear you crying in silence, I can see you, lost in the dark, And I am near you, turn to me now, There's room in this heart tonight;

So many people all over the world Are living in pain and despair, And so many reach out for the hand that can help, Still calling to nobody there;

Well I can hear you, crying in silence, I can see you lost in the dark, And I am near you, turn to me now, There's room in this heart tonight;

There is a part of everyone That cannot see and cannot hear, because we don't want to know, But somewhere there's a bigger heart that's reaching out for all of us, a place to go;

There are so many in life who need a helping hand, Somebody who can heal the pain;

Yes I can hear you, crying in silence, I can see you, you're lost in the dark, And I am near you, turn to me now, There's room in this heart tonight, There's room in this heart tonight, There's room in this heart tonight.
