

Time To Forgive

Chris Trapper

There's a man who keeps his hopes held high up in a paper cup He's got that ripped down at the bottom, Spills down on the floor bad luck
So, It's that which makes you desperate That which drives you to your knees Makes you steal from your own brother and run endlessly

It's time to forgive these sins

And a woman is not wicked if she starts wishing for herself
When her husband's out around the town, courting someone else There's a man who comes to visit her each August afternoon
It will last her through the winter when she's hurt and confused

It's time to forgive these sins

Four true friends are speeding parked there in a parking lot Sometimes in suburbia it seems like drugs are all you got The ambulance was screaming, you were shaking just like death Now a whole town is shattered, there's only three true friends left

It's time to forgive these sins
