

Cry Like A Man

Christy Moore

Take a look around you, how much longer can you live this way
Trash on the floor from weeks before, just gets deeper by the day

Cant let go of that foolish pride, you keep it locked up inside
Time to face the pain, stand up and cry like a man

There's no one left to blame now, she had her reason why she had to go

The feelings you hid the love you couldn't give kept her from touching your soul

You got to break down that fortress inside and surrender to the tears in your eyes

You'll never be free again til you cry like a man

So stand up and cry like a man

Stand up and cry

You know she's gone for good now, your love is torn beyond repair

There's not a trace of a tear on your face, there ought to be some there

Those deep emotions you keep in the dark, if you don't let them out there goin' to freeze up your heart

You'll never be in love again til you cry like a man

So stand up and cry like a man

Stand up and cry
