

Figure You Out

Citizen

There's a silence in the room,
I don't speak quite like you do.
You got my fingers crossed,
But I'll catch myself and I'll wish you off.
And I never thought the words you'd cast would hurt so much.
For that, well I won't look back.
And I never thought the one you trust would stab your back,
I guess it's not so bad.

There's a window in my room,
I can't see clear like you do.
I won't move my mouth and I'll stand up straight just to push you out.
So I can see your insides out,
And figure you out.

And I never thought the words you'd cast would hurt so much.
For that, well I won't look back.
And I never thought the one you trust would stab your back,
I guess it's not so bad.

And I never thought I'd kill you off when you're all I know.
For that, well I won't look back.
And I never thought I'd lose it all, then I heard your plans,
I guess it's not so bad.

It's not so bad.
It's not so bad.

So I cut you open so I could see you inside out.
And figure you out.