

My Heart Will Never Know

Clay Walker

I pour two cups of coffee, put the paper on the table
So we can share the morning news
Your voice answers our phone when we're not home
Friends who call can leave a message here for you
Every night I leave the light on, you're just working late
As far as I can see everything is still the same

And my heart will never know, so I don't fall apart
I fool myself for another day that you're not really gone
After all this time it's still too hard to let you go
As long as I don't say, "Goodbye" my heart will never know

It's been a long cold December, the snow outside keeps fallin'
I light a fire when you get home
It reminds me of the first night we made love
Like it would last forever and nothing could go wrong
You're a part of me, a part of everything I do
So I keep holding on, hiding from the truth

So my heart will never know, so I don't fall apart
I fool myself for another day that you're not really gone
And after all this time it's still too hard to let you go
As long as I don't say, "Goodbye" my heart will never know
And after all this time it's still too hard to let you go
As long as I don't say, "Goodbye" my heart will never know
