There Never Was a Train

(Clint Black/Hayden Nicholas) Given up on traveling' It's driving me insane Riding alone on a midnight train Now a mind can wonder And that's far from being free 'Cause when that lonesome sunset whistle blows This is where I'll be I hopped a westbound for San Antone From there to Santa Fe And It's a thousand miles from there to home And there's a thousand things to say About a man bound to ramble And a dream he's got to lose That'll break this fever set him free And bring him home to you Somewhere I slipped off track But the world keeps going by But there never was a train That couldn't try There'll be nobody waiting My goodbyes are too long gone From that moment at the station When I left from right to wrong But now I finally nearly made it It was a long uphill climb To right back to where I started from But I think I can this time Somewhere I slipped off track But the world keeps going by But there never was a train That couldn't try Somewhere I slipped off track I was thinking I could fly But there never was a train That couldn't try
