Are you sleeping under tables out in the park till 4 a.m. it's no wonder she has left you with trembling sad and silver hands

What's going trough your head

Do you think you're still a capitain when you sail a sinking ship I see you bragging in the corner to a shrinking audience

The tale that never ends

Ghost in the dark
a shadow cast in a crowded bar room cold reckless heart
no music in man
you are ghost in the dark slipping trough the cracks drowning in the letters never sent

And do you shiver in the morning when your clothes have been soaked through like daggers cut to bone the wind is carving holes in you

Lost and left behind

I know you wish to bury hatchets before they come to bury you seeking tender arms of lovers and the warmth of fire lit rooms

Are you coming home tonight

Ghost in the dark
a shadow cast in a crowded bar room
cold reckless heart
no music in man
drowning in the letters

Ghost in the dark
a shadow cast in a crowded bar room
no music in man

drowning in the letters never sent drowning in the letters never sent drowning in the letters never sent
