

She said, "I want a real rose"
Colors and everyone knows
The dust kicked off your shoes
Floats like angelical moons
Silouttes in the corners of your mind
Sublime like the cracks of your smile
Pray that I'll keep you covered
Collapse the trees that shudder

Bleach the colors from your clothes
Believe you love her cause she knows
Bleed the blood from your bones
Two-tone baby, stealing love from a stone

Oh, stone, grave for the time spent alone
Oh, stone, brave for the time spent alone

I've waited for you to wander
To justify your needs to squander
You claimed me like a trophy
Distracted ever so slowly
I'll make it up to you one day
Promise I won't wish it away
The island that we live on
Crumbled like lost devotion

Bleach the colors from your clothes
Believe you love her cause she knows
Bleed the blood from your bones
Two-tone baby, stealing love from a stone

Oh, stone, grave for the time spent alone
Oh, stone, brave for the time spent alone

Do you love her skin
So frail you'll never make it devine
Fooling around
And this is for life, this is for life
Summer skin
So pale there's a speck in your eyes
Splitting lie
And this is for life, this is for life

Oh, stone, grave for the time spent alone
Oh, stone, brave for the time spent alone