Converge

Those nights we had and the trust we lost The sleep that fled me and the heart I lost It all reminds me just how callous and heartless the true cowards are And I write this for the loveless And for the risks we take I'll take my love to the grave As tired and worn it is I'll take my love to the grave Bitter and Then Some Death to cowards, traitors, and empty words To those adorned with the touch of rose petals And the blessed gift of forgetfulness For these are your years and days to outshine Push on and soar higher This is your memory, your everything, and the in-between Push on and soar higher