

A Little Of You

Conway Twitty

Today, I put on your favorite shirt
I know you won't see me, but what can it hurt
It's just a piece of your memory that stayed behind
It hangs in my closet and here in my mind.

Oh, oh, In every thing that I do
There will always be a little of you
In my soul emblazened and blue
There will always be a little of you.

In every smile I have to force on my face
In every tear that I ever taste
In every victory that I like to share
In every loss when I wish you were there, beside me.

Oh, oh, in everything that I do
There will always be a little of you
In my soul emblazened and blue
There will always be a little of you.

I'm all over the pain
But the scars remain, to remind me.

Oh, oh, in everything that I do
There will always be a little of you
In my soul emblazened and blue
There will always be a little of you.

Oh, oh, there's a little of you...
