Floorboard Blues

Cowboy Junkies

Check under his floorboard, mama I don't trust his silly grin He's got a beat up rambler, Nebraska plates I ain't gettin' in

I don't like the way his pinky ring Picks up the dashboard light Or his short little piggy fingers Or the way his belt is cinched too tight

Check under his floorboard, mama I don't like his suggestive tone The way his words drip from his mouth As he asks, "Can I take you home?"

I don't care how many miles I got I think I'd rather walk them alone Than to sit in the back seat As his eyes in the mirror Reduce me to flesh and bone

Check under his floorboard, mama 'Cause that razor's not just a threat to me He'll be slicin' tiny crescents from your heart Without layin' a sweaty palm on your cheek

Don't accuse me of runnin' scared Listen to what I'm sayin' It's a fucked up ol' world but this ol' girl Well, she ain't givin' in
