Craig Armstrong

The time has come For me to leave this place The light, the sound of the cars Have made me broken If you could change your mind If you could change your mind Going back to the sea Your skin and the sky light Are fading to the distance The soul of the light I must have Echoes through the building If you would call my name If you would call my name Going back to the sea If you would change your mind If you would change your mind I'm going back to the sea
