

Call To Arms (Act I)

Crown the Empire

Dear citizens of the New Fallout,
For too long, our society has succumbed to the tyranny of our own actions.
Wars. Riots.
We have tolerated the scum and have graciously cleaned up the mess.
Well, no more.
You have all been a consequence of the disease known as freedom,
and now it is time to take that freedom away.
As of today, you will be stripped of your identity, and anything you hold dear in life.
For it is your individuality that has led to your destruction.
Your children will be left to rot as punishment for your indiscretion, and the lives you have lived until now will be nothing but a memory.
This is for the survival of the race.
This is for the New Fallout.
This is the end.
[End of the spoken intro]

In the darkest night, the faintest light is blinding.
In the darkest night, the faintest light is blinding.

For my fallen stars
Bannermen ready for your call to arms
and for my broken hearts
It's time to take back what we thought we'd lost

For my fallen stars
Bannermen ready for your call to arms
and for my broken hearts
It's time to take back what we thought we'd lost

This is the resistance
It's a call to arms
The anthem for all those who don't belong

We're here to take our stand

This is the resistance
It's been far too long
That we've put all our faith in to the corrupt

It's time to start the end
