Anti-christ And Bar Codes

Antichrist and barcodes In the air that we breathe With a little black box I hide in the sky In the water that trickles in our mouths

In the codes that flicker are lives On and off Does the carton nights Starts to swallow and shiver And to freeze

The fish belly up The unborn served up Obeying the planets No insense is strong enough To make this life complete

Alpha and omega The great in the small The butterflies flutter by The foxes stop running

The moon As sharp as a sickle And as bright as a pin Breathed it's heavy sick breath As we fitfully slept And heavily dreamed

To awake Back into endings And quietly wait For the trains to stop chugging And the clocks to implode

His name is under our skin And so by the hair Of my chinny chin chin By hook or by crook Our necks are in the news
