

All I Need

Dan Hartman

Boy does it ever hurt
It's like striking up a gun and losing your shroud
When the pain is too great to think about anymore
So I go on looking for things to work out

All I need is the feeling of belonging somewhere
After stepping out to the naked light
All I need is the feeling of belonging somewhere
But I cry every night, cause it's no where in sight

Drifting away from anything concrete that's coming my way
Knowing all the time the things I need to ease my display
I'll go falling, falling away

All I need is the feeling of belonging somewhere
After stepping out to the naked light
All I need is the feeling of belonging somewhere

This emptiness I feel, so self-destructive
What am I to do to be saved?
Pull me from this hurricane

All I need is the feeling of belonging somewhere

All I need
That's all I need

(All I need is the feeling of belonging)
We all need to belong somewhere
I need to belong, (all I need), somewhere, somewhere
That's all I need
That's all I need
