

People

Dan Hill

There are people that fall into my life
Each one can change my world so slightly
And everyone so different yet so much the same
Each and everyone so deep inside me

I love, I hate, I live, I die
For every single day that passes me by
But for all the pain that meets my eyes
I still believe in people

Now I've been called naive just a reckless dreamer
Destined to drown in all my feelings
Yet I keep on smiling through my tears
Juggling wonderment with fear
Just trying to find some meaning

I love, I hate, I live, I die
For every single day that passes me by
But for all the pain that meets my eyes
I still believe in people

Now there are times when I feel like giving it all up
I'll look into myself and see a stranger
Oh and nothing, nothing can seem stranger

But I know I'll come around and like the fool I am
I'll feel this world so much stronger
'Cause that's the way my life lights spins
Until the day it dims, until my life will be no longer

I love, I hate, I live, I die
For every single day that passes me by
But for all the pain that meets my eyes
I still believe in people