

Mason Dixon Line

Dan Seals

I can hear the distant rumbling
From the unrest in your heart
The dark winds are blowing
Come to tear us apart

Our point of view is different
Depending on which side we're on
And every harsh word echoes
And surely comes back home

Are we separate from each other
Or will we both unite
We come from different places
But love's not black or white
There's something here worth saving
If we reach across in time
We're living on a Mason Dixon Line

We were standing here together
Before the trouble came
Now it circles all around us
Like a moth to a flame
Whoa they say a house divided
In time will surely fall
Will you stand here beside me
With our backs against the wall

Change our hearts
Make us whole
Help us see forever
