

Tell Them Who You Are

Daniel Powter

You can say what you want
You can say what you feel
You hide in your mask
But you know it's not real

You can lock all the doors
And pretend you're not home
You can stand in the crowd
But you still feel alone

The invisible man
Who told stars from afar
Stand up and then tell them
Who you are

You can pray to your gods
You can fall to your knees
And when you look in the mirror
Your body burns with disease

You can gamble on faith
You can blame who you blame
You can run from yourself
You can't run from the pain

Now we all have a place
And we're all falling stars
Stand up and then tell me
Who you are

Please, for me
Stand up and then tell them
Who you are

At the end of your rope
When the sun's going down
And there's nowhere to go
And there's no one around
We still have a place
Cause we're all falling stars
Stand up and then tell them
Who you are
