

The World's Not Falling Apart

Dar Williams

Welcome to the golden age of speed with grace, waiting for the angry gods to smite our race.

I logged on to Africa for just one day, I opened a door and that's OK

It's not an end, it's just a start, not an end, it's just a start.

The world's not falling apart, the world's not falling apart, because of me.

I have watched the kids who make their scenes. I have met the riot grrls who print their zines.

They write the word, they raise a thought. They say who they are, they try what they're not.

Because life is such a changing art, life is such a changing art.

The world's not falling apart, the world's not falling apart, because of me.

The closest thing to God that I have heard, is when I knew I did not have the final word.

You say the world has lost its love; I say embrace what it's made of.

I'll snake a camera to your heart, snake a camera to your heart

The world's not falling apart, the world's not falling apart, because of me.
