

Her Silent Language

Dark Tranquillity

Why do I see her, the never ending nights?
Why do I see her, wearing nothing but the dark?

Have you come in to warn me?
A warn I cannot see
You want to tell me something
But you do not have the words

I know where you live
I can see it through your darkness
And when you sleep I hear a heart that beats you

Have you come in to warn me?
A warn I cannot see
You want to tell me something
But you do not have the words

I fought/fall into the distance
A life that does not connect
Time played well its parts
On the strings that bind us

Encounters in silence
Words elude the freeing night
Wish I could feed them
But its too hard to tell

Her head hangs low
In the silence of a room
Her head hangs low
She takes a bite out of her heart

Have you come in to warn me?
With words I cannot see
You want to tell me something
But you do not have the words
