

... And So You Fell

David Ford

... And so you fell

well nothing broke your fall and so you fell down like concrete angels like a nickel to the well dragging a wish for silence and friends all stand around and shake their heads and ask how it could be that nothing broke your fall and so you fell nothing broke your fall and so you fell a heart so heavy with the drink like ophelia to the deep in truth more strange than fiction before the morning starts again all desperate times and desperate men still nothing broke you fall and so you fell well nothing broke your fall and so you fell heaven hold your broken sprit now if that's what you believed in from a house of brittle things and from a room of splinters still tiny minded thoughts i think someone else will fix my drinks tonight since nothing broke your fall and so you fell

well nothing broke your fall and so you fell