

Need Me Now

David Hodges

In the stillness can you feel me moving
Trying desperately to come and rescue you
Running farther from my arms of mercy
You'd be running to me if you only knew
Searching for some kind of answer
To a world that you've lost somehow
But I guess you don't need me now

In the darkness can you see me shining
Holding light that reaches far beyond yourself
Hiding deeper in the shadows of a world that you can never seem to never let me in Standing on your own agenda
One day every knee will bow
But I guess you don't need me now

But you say, you're trusting in my power
But you live your life as though you were the king
But you pray in your darkest hour
Will you let me be the Lord of everything

In this silence can you hear my whispers
And even screaming doesn't make a sound
Wishing you would turn your eyes to heaven
But it seems that you can't keep them off the ground
Searching for some kind of answer
To a world that you've lost somehow
But I guess you don't need me now

But you say, you're trusting in my power
But you live your life as though you were the king
But you pray in your darkest hour
Will you let me be the Lord of everything

But you say, trusting in my power
But you live your life as though you were the king
But you pray in your darkest hour
Will you let me be the Lord of everything
