Hina

David Lee Roth

Those eyes burn holes Into the starry night And when her sleepy eyes are open wide You can barely dance beneath her light And I'd love to get to know the natives But I'm only flesh and blood She'll share your joys but not your sorrows Mistress of the coming flood Hina Cool upon the silent sea Hina Isn't she the moon queen? Hina Whispering in my dreams You must come back to me And the tides rise, a distant sigh Falls on deaf ears Her vision makes you every inch a king King for a million years And she loves you when you're leavin' And she'll leave you if you stay She says, "Don't tell me that you love me. You'll hate me for hearning it once I drift away." Hina I can hear you softly cry Hina Your storms and lullablies Hina I'll whisper in your dreams Till you come back to me Come back But she will never stay Come back And you must never wait Never wait, never wait, never wait Come back, back, back Ooh yeah Ooh yeah, yeah Na, na, na, na, na Woah Hina Come back But she will never stay Come back And you must never wait Never wait, never wait, never wait