

Place In Heaven

Dawn of Destiny

On a cold dark night a girl stands all alone
No one to hold her tight left to be on her own
All the time the snow came down
No way to go, no road to take

A few miles later she stands by the lake
Someone freezes beside the water the face is signed by fear
The girl's overwhelmed by compassion
She can't hold back a tear

So she gives away almost all that she's got
To save one's life, to not drown in the flood
We're both alone, won't you come with me?
No, I'd rather be on my own...

Further on she walks even poorer now
Thoughts running through her mind
Why didn't he want to stay though I have saved his life

A fireplace inside the forest
The fire's almost burning out
Another girls' life slowly seems to fade
She cries for help she screams out loud

So she gives away almost all that she's got
To save one's life, to not drown in the flood
Please come with me, I feel so lost
I'll return home, maybe one day we'll meet...

It seems like there's no place here on earth
But there has to be a place in heaven
Out in the cold and still alone
No one cares about a lonely girl

Another soul is yet to save tonight - one more body not holding her tight
Sinking down in the snow she never wakes up again

Tomorrow might bring a better place for her
Tomorrow might bring a place in heaven

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more
Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more
Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more
Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more

Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more
Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome

It is a world worth dying for
Just because there must be more
Somewhere in this universe
A good heart will be welcome
