A Final Vestige

Daylight Dies

our dreams are ephemeral an elusive blur defenseless without devotion compromised by indifference adrift and asleep unconscious to transgression the noise of the world the thief of what once defined oceans of distractions run rings round our eyes awake enough to realize we're tethered to the world adrift and asleep unconscious to transgression the noise of the world the thief of what once defined us