

To Where The Skies Are Blue

DeadLock

Sun goes down once again
While I sit here and feel the tears
Running down my cheeks
No I am not afraid of the dark

But the darker it gets
The more I realize
That there is no one to depend on
No one to believe in

And so I wait to die here all alone
Like the daylight dies while it is fading away
Because nobody knows for sure
That the sun will burn through that cold night once more
Through that cold night once more

To where the skies are blue...

So I pray for someone
To come and make my life seem like
It's still worth living it
So I pray for you to come

And so I wait to die here all alone
Like the daylight dies while it is fading away
Because nobody knows for sure
That the sun will burn through that cold night once more
Through that cold night once more

But still the hardest things to say
Are the words that mean the most
So come on angel, say that you
Love me and nothing in this
World will ever scare me again
Take me to where the skies are blue
Always blue
Always blue
Always, yeah...

And so I wait to die here all alone
Like the daylight dies while it is fading away
Because nobody knows for sure
That the sun will burn through that cold night once more