

They Call It The Easy Life

Deaf Havana

From the off, in sunlight we watched and gathered round for the ominous 9 o'clock, with inhibitions drowned and sun beating down, we kick start this revolution, we woke up, left by the beach sand in our toes and glass round our feet, I bought these shoes last time I saw you look how worn they are no, holy shit we're fucking smoking now, we'll keep this alive until the day that we die,

we all sat down, and we all sang,
we'll keep this alive until the day that we die,
we all sat down, and we all sang,
we'll keep this alive until the day that we die,

but after all X years have been hard, on this skin and I'm replaced by a hollow shell, broken up I never wished to hear about your life before me, without a female's skin to soften these hands, I never pushed right to the edge but with all of the friends I've known, and we'd still sing and we'd still sing without you,

we all sat down and we all sang,
we'll keep this alive until the day that we die,
we all sat down and we all sang,

by now we know this was growing old,
but my god we knew we'd tried,

by now we know this was growing old,
but my god we knew we'd tried,

but when my chest aches this hard ,
and when life fell short of the bar,
but when my chest aches this hard,
and when I've reached the top of the hill and we still sing, we still sing, we still sing.
