

Pullman, Washington

Deep Blue Something

Crawl to the window
Whisper to me if it snowed
We'll plot to murder each other
And I'll be your alibi.

Bind me with wire
Tell me your favorite vice
And I'll discuss my childhood
- If you need a sedative.

I like rain,
the innocence in praying,
The faded faintly childhood smell of plastic
When it's set to burn
Angel dust, the two of us,
Fresh-faced reminders of lessons that we'll Never learn.

I see you're sleeping
You always can cry if it helps
My soul is by the telephone
- If you're needing sympathy.
And the rain won't wash away all that you hold to be true
It remains somehow indifferent
- Regarding the weatherman.