House Built For Two

The years have been turning on You left me at home To carve my own stone I cried picking up pride Oh, granite won't lie We all got along

Well, it's true Build this for you A house fit for two Is too small for you

Our son is losing his mind His drugs that he hides You can see in his veins The steps he's needing to take His back it might break We both need you here

It's true I build this for you A house fit for two Is too small for you

It's a shame Leave you to blame Changing your name And left him insane

Return like a prodigal sheep It's cold in the keep But I have you here I work hard then watch some TV You staring at me What are you doing there?

Get up, lay down your crown What are you doing now? Say I'm tired as hell

Yeah, I'm broke Ain't got as much as you To tell you the truth Still am your man

It's true I build this for you A house fit for two Is too small for you

It's a shame Leave you to blame Changing your name And left me insane

The words on the tip of your tongue Like a song I once sung

Delta Spirit

And you threw it away That tune, old melody Had hope in its ring Those years never came
