Deviation

Diary of Dreams

And the place was burning Where once my cradle stood Memories still yearning For what my childhood took

In peaceful shelter I may rest Just instincts of salvation O'deviate from the within But hate I may not feel

A nations decay within my eyes Imploring still in vague seclusion A tear from a child's eye- obeying still But fate just ties together

What's my flesh And what my skin What my privilege And what a sin

Have I come to stay What I can never be Have I come to beg For a new identity To blame

Oh I have tried to fly But I did not have wings I have tried to speak But I did not know how

Like a new-born child I have tried to trust Reaching out But my cradle burning

A nations decay within my eyes Imploring still in vague seclusion A tear from a child's eye- obeying still But fate just ties together

Just memories today Yes, I exist, but do I also live I must deviate from the within But hate I may not feel