Genesis

Dominici

Detective Anthony Dam is prepared for his final destination. He is told the truth and the reasons for everything. He is the sole survivor and the only living carrier of the human DNA. He will be placed in a cleared spot back on Earth, in a garden, in order for human life to flourish again. The only thing he will remember is his name and that he was placed there by his creator, a superior being. He is wearing the remnants of a shirt with his name embroidered; "A. Dam" on the pocket. The captors refer to him as "Adam". Before being placed on the surface, some DNA is taken from one of his ribs in order to create for him a female companion.

Long ago our visits were recorded on great stones As man became more sinister he was best left alone Those in power hid the truth though some had learned first hand We are the real creators of what lived upon this land

For centuries your people searched for the meaning of life Believed in many different stories That might help them in their strife Now for you the truth will no longer be concealed Now the time has come for you when all will be revealed So kneel!

We are the lords; we're your creators Place no other before us Kneel Down, we're your creators Place no other before us

Who are you really and why am I here? Way down below us, what's that blue sphere? Is that the earth, why am I bound? One hundred thousand miles above ground?

It's all too hard to grasp, I'm trying to believe you I suppose that you Made the dinosaurs too?

"No, that was somebody else"

What about the jungle animals All the wildlife, cats and dogs?

"Some of our finest work"

"Now you shall learn the truth"

You were but hosts for the DNA This precious code must not fade away We made your kind to keep it alive Now only you can ensure that it survives We are the lords; we're your creators Place no other before us Kneel Down, we're your creators Place no other before us

We are the lords; we're your creators We made your world now we took it away Kneel Down, we're your creators

Go now 'Adam', make your life you are our last recruit Just be sure you don't partake of the forbidden fruit!

.....Why was I planted here?