Don't Miss Now

Downhere

The life you chose There's never a list for it
Of cons and pros
You find what you love, and you commit

And you're looking so far down
The road so well
That you could forget your crown
Isn't just somewhere else

You get bumped and bruised and worse
For choosing the road less traveled
You know the reward is rich
If you persist through the darkest battles
Open your eyes,
Your prize is right before you, somehow
Whatever you do, just don't miss now

You're on a bus Don't notice the miles and months fly by To the rest of us You're living the highest kind of life

And though the price you pay Is costlier than it seems It's worth another day The end justifies your means

All that you're working for Could blind you to the treasures all around you So don't miss these moments, please The joy before the crown you seek
